CREATIVE ARTS COUNSELLING with CHILDREN

An experiential weekend workshop aiming to explore – How we are present in the folds of uncertainty, and how we make sense of children's experience using play and creative arts

The workshop will include an introduction to sand-tray work, a method of exploration involving the use of small objects in a tray of sand, with case studies as well as opportunities to observe and facilitate others in their exploration.

It will be of interest to those working therapeutically with children, and professionals with a curiosity about this form of inquiry, arts based and influenced by humanistic and existential approaches. No previous artistic experience is required.

This activity is accredited for PACFA's Professional Development requirements
